

Updated: June 20, 2025

Local Historic Districts are designated by the City to protect and maintain the historic character of neighborhoods.

Proposed exterior changes and demolitions are subject to local design review process, to ensure modifications to historic properties are compatible with the site's historic architecture, and preserve the "character-defining" elements of the property.

All locally-designated districts in Salt Lake City are listed on the National Register, but not all National Register districts are locally-designated.

For questions and more information, contact:
historicpreservation@slc.gov or 801.535.7700.